

Welcome to Governor's Residence

Enter a city where the past is alive. History plays out across Yangon's colourful streets

Discover Myanmar

"This is Burma," wrote Rudyard Kipling, "and it is unlike any land you know about." The same sense of wonder is invoked at Governor's Residence

To venture to Myanmar is to take the the road less travelled. Recent history has left the country closed off from the world and relatively untouched. Today visitors can discover vibrant cities, blissful beaches and resplendent Buddhist temples – the hallmark of this sacred land. Arrive at Yangon International Airport and you'll be greeted by a sign that reads: "Welcome to Myanmar – The Golden Country".

Perched on the banks of the vast Yangon River, Yangon is Myanmar's largest city. Here, past and present live in harmony. Fin-de-siècle architecture rubs shoulders with modern buildings, roads circle majestic temples. Against this vibrant backdrop, the gentle Burmese people go about their daily lives.

In the leafy Embassy Quarter, Governor's Residence offers an idyllic escape. Dating from the 1920s, this mansion is a relic from a romantic era in which colonial grandeur is married with Burmese beauty. Set amid tropical gardens, the hotel is especially magical at sunset. After a day exploring, take time to reflect in the balmy evening air.

Golden stupas reach into a diffuse sky as the majestic Yangon River carves its path.

Uncover Yangon

Yangon is a city of change: historical splendour and thriving modernity collide on its intriguing streets. A kaleidoscope of colour and life awaits

Once the capital of Myanmar, Yangon – formerly Rangoon – remains the country's stronghold of commercial and cultural life. Its majestic past still manifests in its colonial-style buildings and deeply religious society. Gilded pagodas glint in the golden sunrise while lines of burgundy-robed monks thread along the streets. Seeing the golden Shwedagon Pagoda at sunrise is a "pinch me" moment.

There are few better ways to tap into the energy of this city than wandering its colourful streets. Known as the Garden City of the East, Yangon is alive with leafy public parks that are perfect for a sedate stroll. Admire heritage buildings or wander around local marketplaces as traders haul sackfuls of cabbages and shoppers barter, their bags laden with groceries.

In recent years, Yangon has come to the fore as the most exciting place in Myanmar. As the country opens up to the world, so artists and investors have flooded this city with new restaurants, bars, shops and hubs of creativity. This is a place on the cusp of change, where the synergy between past and present is tangible.

A Warm Welcome

Escape the hubbub of the city and be transported to a tropical oasis. Our haven of bygone colonial luxury offers respite from the world beyond. Mingalaba...

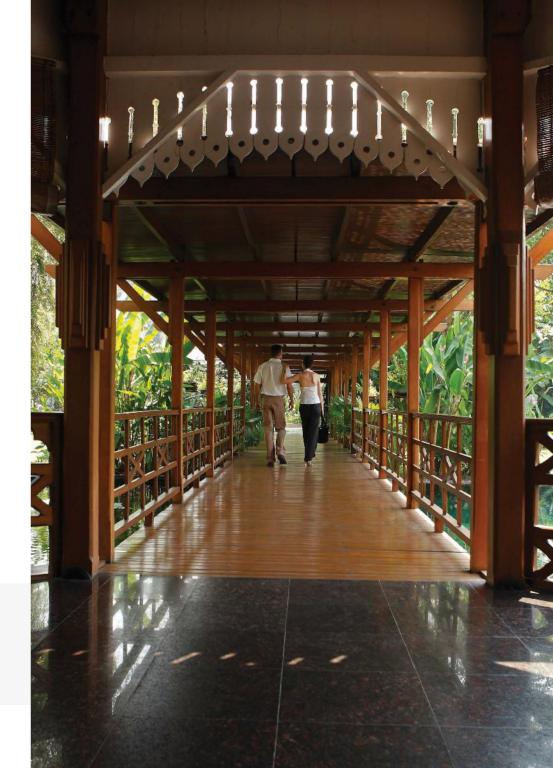

A guest's arrival at Governor's Residence is heralded by a gong, such is the ceremony of a welcome here. Pass along a teak walkway as you make your way through tranquil gardens threaded with lotus ponds. To arrive at our 1920s mansion is to step back into a slower time; wraparound verandas are adorned with a gingerbread-style trim.

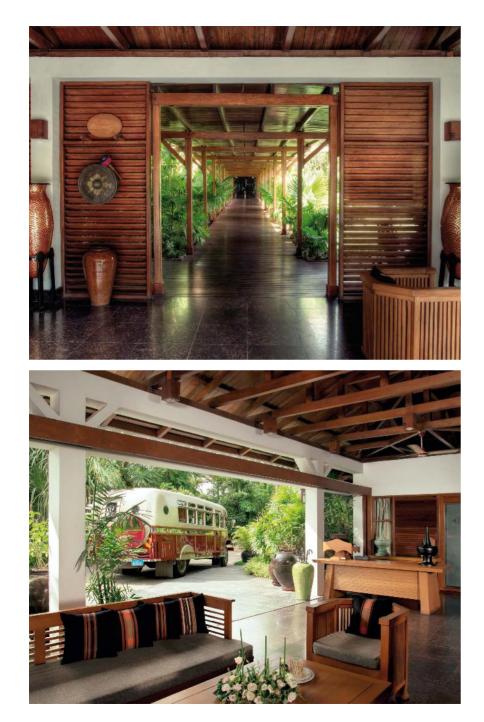

Once home of the Kaya States' Governor, the hotel is history come to life – and you're here to be part of it. Within our walls the elegance of a long-gone era mingles with Myanmar's rich beauty and culture. Rooms adorned with carved teak, silk, crisp linens and mesmerising local artworks are awash with light.

Evenings here announce themselves softly, with the fragrance of Myanmar's exquisite flowers on the breeze. Breathe deeply and inhale the scent of orchids, red torch ginger and the native amherstia nobilis – known here as Queen of the flowering trees. These are moments of utter bliss.

Just a short journey from the hotel, it's best visited at dawn when devotees make offerings as the city stirs. Later delve into life on the outskirts with a slow-paced trip on the Yangon Circular Railway.
